ABSTRACT

This language arts curriculum guide for the Sylvania (Ohio) City Schools is designed to provide for the systematic teaching of grammar and the mechanics of writing from kindergarten through the secondary grades. The guide is divided into sections according to grade level. Each of these sections, presented in topical format, emphasizes the elements of language appropriate to the grade level. For example, in grade 4 the students study the parts of speech, sentence structure, paragraphing, word composition, mechanics, the rudiments of outlining, reference skills, writing skills, and the history of the English language. By the tenth grade, students study grammar and usage, composition, logic and reasoning, and vocabulary development through literature. Each section of this curriculum guide concludes with a yearly evaluation form which allows teachers to make suggestions and recommendations for improving the curriculum guide. (RB)

FORWARD

The formal teaching of grammar has always posed a problem. To accomplish this difficult task the teachers in the Sylvania City Schools, under the direction of the Sylvania Curriculum Council Language Arts Subcommittee, have developed the following scope and sequence for K-12 to provide for the systematic teaching of grammar and the mechanics of writing.

Each teacher is responsible for teaching the concepts and skills outlined for each grade level. The program is geared to the average student. The individual teacher, therefore, must make the necessary adjustments in the program to meet the needs of the slow learner and the above-average student. While it is obligatory for the teacher to follow the scope and sequence, creative use of the subject matter and teaching methods is encouraged.

Beginning with the 1971-72 school year, it will be the responsibility of the professional staff to work with all students to develop and strengthen their language skills. Every teacher is responsible for teaching grammar and the mechanics of communication. She must devote the time necessary to upgrade the student's skills to meet the minimum requirements of his grade level as stated in this scope and sequence. Before any teacher should introduce new curriculum on his grade level, the earlier concepts should be introduced and mastered by the student. The recommended scope and sequence will take a minimum of three years to become operational at all grade levels.

A supply of evaluation forms like those at the end of each grade level in the scope and sequence will be available in the individual buildings. Each teacher is to complete the form and return it to the office of the Director of Instruction at the end of the 1971-72 school year. The comments on these forms will be used to improve the scope and sequence.

The members of the Language Arts Subcommittee who vere responsible for the scope and sequence and the textbook adoption are as follows:

Ellen Cooper, Chairman
Earl Heath, Consultant
Eleanor Scott
Bernice Musick
Linda Stout
Marjane Baker
Nancy Goodman
Linda Wannamaker
Donelda Fleck
Julia Hoch

PHILOSOPHY

Language arts must be a dramatic, creative experience for all shildren.

It must be an interpretation of his experiences and an awareness and expansion of his surroundings.

A child needs to acquire an active motivation to listen well, to speak plainly, to read fluently and intelligently, and to write effectively.

The art of communications must be mastered according to the individual's ability to become an active participant in an ever-expanding world.

He must develop confidence and he must be able to derive personal satisfaction through his participation in language arts. He must become involved in language activities that are challenging, realizing that they are a necessary part of all he does.

The teacher's responsibility is to provide motivation and opportunities for each child to develop effective communication skills and abilities through a wide variety of situations and activities.
